

Introduction to
GERMAN PHILOSOPHY

FROM KANT TO HABERMAS

Andrew Bowie

CONTENTS

Preface	viii
Introduction	1
1 The Kantian Revolution	13
Making Kant Accessible	14
The First Critique	17
The Transcendental Subject	21
Judgement	24
Reason	27
Morals and Foundations	30
Nature and Freedom: The Third Critique	35
2 The Discovery of Language: Hamann and Herder	41
Origins of Language	41
Irrationalism	43
Hamann: Language and Reason	45
Herder	50
The Origin of Language	54
3 German Idealism: From Fichte to the Early Schelling	58
The Limits of Self-Determination	58
Foundationalism and the Subject	60
The Idealist Claim	65
Fichtean Idealism	68
Nature and Mind: Schelling	71

4 German Idealism: Hegel	79
Universal Mediation	79
The Phenomenology of Mind	81
Questions of Being	88
5 Critiques of Idealism I: The Early Romantics to Feuerbach	94
Romanticism and the Critique of Idealism	94
Reason and Will	101
The Young Hegelians and the End of Philosophy	110
6 Critiques of Idealism II: Marx	118
The Ends of Philosophy	118
Alienation	120
Historical Materialism	126
7 Critiques of Idealism III: Nietzsche	133
Tragedy and Modernity	133
Fiction, Rhetoric and Argument	138
Revaluations	142
Genealogy and the Will to Power	146
Four Options	154
8 The Linguistic Turn	156
Origins	156
Frege	160
The Vienna Circle and Wittgenstein's Tractatus	166
Scientific Philosophy	176
9 Phenomenology	181
The Continental/Analytical Divide	181
The Central Concepts of Husserl's Phenomenology	184
Foundational Problems	192
Mathematization and the Life-world	194
10 Heidegger: Being and Hermeneutics	199
Understanding Being	199
Being and Time	204
Truth	212
The 'Turn'	215

11 Critical Theory	222
‘Metaphysics’ and Modernity	222
Walter Benjamin: Language and Time	229
Dialectics and Disaster	234
Negative Dialectics	239
Conclusion	246
Philosophy and Modernity	246
Hans-Georg Gadamer	252
Jürgen Habermas	255
Prospects	264
Glossary	271
References	281
Index	288