

Monetary Economics, Banking and Policy

Expanding Economic Thought to Meet
Contemporary Challenges

Edited by Penelope Hawkins and Ioana Negru

Contents

List of illustrations	vii
List of contributors	ix
Foreword	xi
JOHN KING Acknowledgements	xvii
Introduction	1
PENELOPE HAWKINS
1 Macprudential institutionalism: the Bank of England's Financial Policy Committee and the contemporary limits of central bank policy	9
JAMIE MORGAN
2 Central Bank independence: are the glory days over?	26
CHARLES GOODHART
3 The efficacy of monetary policy in an age of financialisation and climate change	35
MALCOLM SAWYER
4 Keynes on individual behaviour and the possibility of involuntary unemployment equilibrium	49
ROY J. ROTHEIM
5 Keynes's Chapter 2 definition of involuntary unemployment	72
CHRISTOPHER TORR
6 What Keynes learned from Kalecki – a brief introduction to the fiscal theory of debt management	90
JAN TOPOROWSKI

7 Payment vs. funding: the law of reflux for today	103
PERRY MEHRLING
8 “Revolution and counter-revolution in UK banks” asset composition since 1945, and why they matter to the debate about horizontalism	119
TIM CONGDON
9 The endogeneity of the money supply in The General Theory	133
G.C. HARCOURT AND PETER KRIESLER
10 Liquidity preference and the digital financial inclusion illusion	144
PENELOPE HAWKINS
11 The rising importance of liquidity-premium analysis: towards a regeneration of liquidity-preference theory?	160
THEODORE KOUTSOBINAS
12 “Regional finance”: beyond theory and dualism	175
CARLOS J. RODRÍGUEZ-FUENTES
13 Money in the early years of the Soviet Union: barter and back again – a short-lived experiment of transformation	187
KOBIL RUZIEV
14 The practicality of pluralism in the economic analysis of the least developed countries	201
DANIEL GAY
15 The body of work of Sheila Dow – publications from 1980 to 2022	216
Index	235