
52 Activities for Improving Cross-Cultural Communication

Donna M. Stringer and Patricia A. Cassidy

I N T E R C U L T U R A L P R E S S

A Nicholas Brealey Publishing Company

BOSTON • LONDON

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	ix

Activities

1. Communication Continuum Exercise	1
2. Second Language Walk-in-Their-Shoes	5
3. Decoding “Work Speak”	7
4. Alpha-Beta Partnership	11
5. A Fair Shake	17
6. The Language of Gestures	21
7. Rational, Emotive, Intuitive	23
8. What Would You Do?	31
9. How Would I Say That?	35
10. E-mail: Communicating Across Cultures	39
11. Toothpicks	47
12. Building Cultural Bridges to Communication	49
13. Are You Listening?	55
14. Communicating Policy in a Cultural Context	59
15. Can Anyone Hear Me?	61
16. Communication Solutions	63
17. Persuasion	71
18. My Rule/Your Rule	77
19. Thought Bubble Role-Plays	81
20. Different Days—Different Ways	87
21. Building Team Communication	93
22. Bridging Behaviors	99
23. The Intercultural Classroom	103
24. What’s in a Word ?	109

25. Pacing	111
26. Switching Directions: Direct/Indirect	115
27. Your Choice: Style Continuum	119
28. Debate or Dialogue?	123
29. First Impressions	127
30. Sounds Like Silence	131
31. Me, Myself, and E-mail	135
32. High Road, Low Road	137
33. E-mail Intent vs. Impact	141
34. Be Specific!	145
35. My Inner Rules	147
36. Nondefensive Communication	151
37. My Name Is	157
38. PALS Dialogue	161
39. If I Woke up Tomorrow	167
40. Building Style Proficiency	171
41. Build a Structure	177
42. Talking Through Touch	181
43. He Learned She Learned	185
44. I Think—You Feel	187
45. What a Funny Thing to Say!	191
46. Mr. Ramirez or José	195
47. Public/Private Self	199
48. What Do You See?	205
49. Delivering the Message	209
50. The “Right” Fit	215
51. “Meeting” Your Needs	221
52. How Rude Was That?	225

Appendices

A Some Core Techniques for Improving Cross-Cultural Communication	229
B General Classification of Activities	231
C References	237

Acknowledgments

This book is made possible by the many colleagues who have contributed exercises and who have kindly offered editorial suggestions that have improved our own exercises. Our colleagues, Andy Reynolds and Elmer Dixon at Executive Diversity Services, Inc. in Seattle, have been particularly generous in developing, testing, and improving communication style exercises. Faculty at the Summer Institute for Intercultural Communication in Portland, Oregon, have contributed substantially to our thinking and skills as trainers and educators, with a special thanks to Janet Bennett. And the rich resource of books offered by Intercultural Press has been our foundation.

We thank the editorial and production team at Intercultural Press for their expertise and careful editing. We owe our enthusiasm for, and confidence in, an experiential learning approach to Sivasailam Thiagarajan, “Thiagi,” and Dianne Hofner Saphiere, to whom we are grateful. Thiagi is a master of the experiential approach, and he always encourages his students to find their own answers to the question. And Dianne has designed many experiential approaches to learning, including the Cultural Detective series, which we have used to the benefit of our clients and participants.

We hope this book is useful to you. Please modify the activities to meet the needs of your audience—as we have through the years.

The authors have made every effort to cite and acknowledge all those from whom research, lecture material, or activities have been adapted.