

Series Editor
Jean-Paul Bourrières

---

Supply Chain Management and Business Performance

---

The VASC Model

Christelle Camman
Claude Fiore
Laurent Livolsi
Pascal Querro

ISTE

WILEY

---

Contents

---

Acknowledgments . . . . .	ix
Foreword . . . . .	xi
Introduction . . . . .	xv
Chapter 1. Managing Performance: Objectives and Managers' Needs . . . . .	1
1.1. Towards greater organizational agility . . . . .	2
1.1.1. Some basic trends and their impacts on businesses . . . . .	3
1.1.2. The evolution of business models: some examples from different sectors. . . . .	10
1.1.3. Divergences, but above all, major trends in performance management . . . . .	38
1.2. Needs and objectives of the CEO and the Board . . . . .	45
1.2.1. The objectives of the CEO and the Board . . . . .	46
1.2.2. Needs in terms of information quality and responsiveness . . . . .	55
1.3. Financial directors' needs and objectives . . . . .	58
1.3.1. The involvement of a Chief Financial Officer (CFO) in the strategic process: from business model to business plan . . . . .	60
1.3.2. Optimizing the business' finance structure . . . . .	66
1.3.3. New objectives in financial strategies . . . . .	70

1.4. Supply chain management and operations management . . . . .	81
1.4.1. Supply chain management: definition and positioning . . . . .	81
1.4.2. Objectives that require a transverse approach . . . . .	88
1.5. Conclusion . . . . .	97

Chapter 2. Management Techniques and Tools . . . . . 99

2.1. Tools for managers . . . . .	100
2.1.1. Tools for measuring the creation of value . . . . .	100
2.1.2. Tools for managing the value chain or the strategy deployment chain . . . . .	105
2.2. Tools at the disposal of CFOs . . . . .	116
2.2.1. The difficult reconciliation of time horizons . . . . .	117
2.2.2. The importance of management control as a support for financial steering . . . . .	127
2.3. The supply chain manager's tools . . . . .	142
2.3.1. Repository of good practices . . . . .	142
2.3.2. Organizational models adapted to transversal management . . . . .	150
2.3.3. Tools for operational steering and their connection with financial steering . . . . .	158
2.3.4. New tools for more financial objectives . . . . .	166
2.4. Conclusion . . . . .	174

Chapter 3. New Ways to Steer Supply Chain Performance . . . . . 177

3.1. Supply chain management through improvement of operational performance . . . . .	184
3.1.1. Performance steering and the value creation process . . . . .	184
3.1.2. Value tree (modeling financial equations) . . . . .	187
3.1.3. The link between business indicators and financial strategy . . . . .	191
3.1.4. Supply chain business model . . . . .	198
3.1.5. From business model to steering supply chain value creation . . . . .	200

---

3.2. Impacts of operational performance on financial management . . . . .	202
3.2.1. The interrelations between changes in cost structure and EBITDA . . . . .	204
3.2.2. The interrelations between changes in depreciation periods and cash flow . . . . .	208
3.2.3. The interrelations between changes in stock levels and WCR . . . . .	210
3.2.4. The cohesion of financing the supply chain business . . . . .	211
3.3. Organization of the VASC model. . . . .	213
3.3.1. A representation of the organization in terms of supply chain . . . . .	214
3.3.2. An approach to steering the VASC model . . . . .	220
3.4. Conclusion . . . . .	225
Conclusion . . . . .	229
Bibliography . . . . .	235
Index . . . . .	245

---

Acknowledgments

---

We would like to thank André Suel, Olivier Bernard and Olivier Naux at DSIA very warmly for the long days, and sometimes evenings, spent discussing business performance management. The data shared and the associated discussions, in an atmosphere that was always scholarly but marked by conviviality and pleasant times, provided the occasion to draw out new problems and therefore new suggestions that contributed to forming the basis of this book.