

George P. Moschis

Consumer Behavior over the Life Course

Research Frontiers and New Directions

 Springer

Contents

1 Introduction	1
1.1 Consumer Research Needs	2
1.1.1 Theory Development	2
1.1.2 Methodological Requirements	3
1.2 Emergent Approaches in Social Sciences	4
1.3 The Emergence of the Life Course as Research Approach	5
1.3.1 Conceptual Foundations	6
1.3.2 Origins of Life Course Research	7
1.3.3 The Life Course Paradigm	9
1.3.4 Relevance to Consumer Research	10
1.4 The Scope and Structure of this Book	12
References	14
2 Efforts to Study Consumers Over Their Life Span	19
2.1 Traditional Approaches	20
2.1.1 Socialization Models	20
2.1.2 Human Development Models	21
2.1.3 Family Life Cycle Models	22
2.2 Traditional Stage Models Vs. The Life Course Paradigm	23
2.3 Life Course Studies of Consumer Behavior	27
2.3.1 Studies with Implicit Life Course Explanations	27
2.3.2 Studies Based on the Life Course Paradigm	29
References	32
3 The Life Course Paradigm: Conceptual and Theoretical Foundations	37
3.1 A Conceptual Life Course Model	38
3.1.1 Events/Changes (T_1) and Outcomes (T_2)	40
3.1.2 Adaptation Processes	41
3.1.3 Contextual Factors	48
3.2 Life Course Assumptions and Premises	49
3.2.1 Effects of Life Events and Adaptation Processes	50

3.2.2	Interdependence of Events and Adaptation Processes	50
3.2.3	Life Course Axioms or “Principles”	52
3.2.4	Transitions, Trajectories, and Turning Points	53
3.3	Concluding Comments	54
	References	55
4	Consumer Behavior in Life Course Context	61
4.1	Consumer Behaviors as Events and Trajectories	61
4.2	Effects of Events and Transitions	63
4.2.1	Direct Effects of Events and Transitions	64
4.2.2	Indirect Effects of Events	66
4.3	Effects of Adaptation Processes	69
4.3.1	Socialization	69
4.3.2	Stress and Coping	70
4.3.3	Human Capital Development, Growth, and Decline	72
4.3.4	Interdependence of Adaptation Processes	74
4.4	Contextual Effects	74
4.4.1	Timing and Time	75
4.4.2	Agency-Related Factors	77
4.4.3	Structural Factors	78
4.5	Summary	79
	References	80
5	The Life Course Research Framework: Illustrative Application in the Study of Financial Behaviors	85
5.1	Models of Financial Behavior	86
5.2	Financial Behaviors in Life Course Context	88
5.2.1	Financial Behaviors	88
5.2.2	Life Events Experienced and Anticipated	90
5.2.3	Adaptation Processes	91
5.2.4	Contextual Factors	93
5.3	Toward a Life Course Model of Personal Finance: A Propositional Inventory	94
5.3.1	Effects of Life Events and Role Transitions	95
5.3.2	Effects of Adaptation Processes	97
5.3.3	Contextual Effects	99
5.4	Summary	105
	References	106
6	Methods of Life Course Research	111
6.1	Quantitative Methods	111
6.1.1	Event History Analysis	112
6.1.2	An Illustration	115
6.1.3	Methodological Issues	119

- 6.2 Qualitative Methods 123
 - 6.2.1 Life Reviews, Life Stories, and Life Histories 124
 - 6.2.2 An Illustration 125
- 6.3 Concluding Comments 126
- References 127

- 7 Contributions to Previous Efforts to Study Consumers over Their Life Span 133
 - 7.1 Consumer Socialization 134
 - 7.1.1 General Conceptual Directions 134
 - 7.1.2 Illustration: The Case of Development of Materialism 135
 - 7.2 Family Life Cycle 137
 - 7.2.1 General Conceptual Directions 137
 - 7.2.2 Illustration: A Family Life Cycle Study in Thailand 139
 - 7.3 Developmental Models 140
 - 7.3.1 General Conceptual Directions 140
 - 7.3.2 Illustration: The Case of Age Identity 141
 - 7.4 Summary 142
 - References 142

- 8 Applications to Select Areas of Consumer Behavior: An Agenda for Future Research 147
 - 8.1 The Value of Possessions 148
 - 8.2 Gift Giving and Transferring Possessions 149
 - 8.3 Preferences for Age-Segmented Stimuli 151
 - 8.4 Cognitive Declines 152
 - 8.5 Consumer Well-Being 153
 - 8.6 Decision-Making 154
 - 8.7 Maladaptive Consumer Behaviors 156
 - 8.7.1 Compulsive Buying 156
 - 8.7.2 Binge Eating and Obesity 159
 - 8.8 General Comments 162
 - References 163

- 9 Implications for Practitioners 169
 - 9.1 Developing Marketing Strategies and Programs 169
 - 9.1.1 Forming Consumer Segments 170
 - 9.1.2 Event-Based Segmentation 171
 - 9.1.3 Understanding Within-Segment Differences 172
 - 9.1.4 Toward Customized Marketing 175
 - 9.1.5 Consumer Relationship Management 180
 - 9.2 Public Policy, Education, and Intervention 181
 - References 182

- 10 Summary, Opportunities, Challenges, and Recommendations 187
 - 10.1 Summary of Previous Approaches and Issues 187
 - 10.2 The Life Course Paradigm as Research Framework 189
 - 10.3 Potential Contributions to Consumer Research 189
 - 10.3.1 Formation, Stability, and Changes in Consumer Behaviors 190
 - 10.3.2 Integrative Multi-Theoretical Framework 191
 - 10.3.3 Toward a Developmental Theory of Consumer Behavior 193
 - 10.4 Recommendations 194
 - 10.5 Conclusion 196
 - References 197

- Index 201